Data as at 8:00am AEST. Change is from the previous trading day (excluding the SFE, which is the change during the night session). Source: Bloomberg.

Main Themes: The Federal Reserve Chair Powell warned of more rate hikes to come, leading to a sell off in share markets and lifting volatility in bond markets.

Share Markets: US share market indexes fell after Fed Chair Powell issued warnings about further rate hikes. Tech shares were particularly hit as AI names weakened. The Dow closed 0.3% lower, the S&P slid 0.5% and the Nasdaq shed 1.2%.

Interest Rates: The US 2-year treasury yield was volatile, initially jumping from 4.69% to 4.74% following strong UK inflation data and later testing 4.75% during Fed Chair Powell's testimony. But then it retraced and at the close was 3 basis points higher at 4.72%. The US 10-year yield round tripped from 3.73% to 3.79% and closed unchanged at 3.72%. Interest-rate markets are almost fully priced for a rate hike when the Fed next meets on 27 July.

Foreign Exchange: The US dollar index was sold off modestly in the overnight session. That saw EUR/USD rise from 1.0910 to a one-month high of 1.0990. USD/JPY round tripped from 141.70 to a 7-month high of 142.36 and back. Meanwhile, AUD/USD roundtripped from 0.6800 to 0.6741 and back.

Commodities: Gold was weaker and oil unchanged.

Australia: There was no major economic data out yesterday.

United Kingdom: Inflation remained higher than expected for a fourth month, shortening market odds that the Bank of England will raise interest rates to nearly 6%. The consumer price index (CPI) rose 0.7% in May, above consensus forecasts for a rise of 0.5%. In year-on-year terms, headline CPI stayed steady at 8.7%.

Core inflation, which excludes food and energy, accelerated unexpectedly from 6.8% in April to a 31-year high of 7.1%.

The Office of National Statistics (ONS) noted that services inflation continued to rise, with gains in recreation and culture at 30-year highs.

United States: Federal Reserve Chair Jerome Powell signalled the Fed will raise rates twice more this year, calling that "a pretty good guess." He told a House panel that officials can now move at a more moderate pace to bring down inflation.

Powell also said the Fed is running down its balance sheet at a pace of about $1 trillion a year. Lawmakers pressed him on plans to strengthen supervision of regional and big banks.
